The 5 Best Music Apps for Android With all the latest and greatest Android devices, there's no way that you can go for long without having to run some sort of music app on your phone.

Whether you're out and about, listening to the radio, or just at home, you'll want to be able to listen to your favorite tracks anywhere. Thankfully, most Android devices can run audio players that are just as good as, or better than, the ones on the desktop. There are a number of music apps for Android, and even though they're not all created equal, there are some that really shine. This list has been put together with your needs in mind, with a focus on quality, functionality, and user experience. Here are the 5 best music apps for Android. 1. Google Play Music Google Play Music is a streaming music player that is inarguably one of the best music apps for Android. Google Play Music also works on any smartphone or tablet running Google's Android software, and features a powerful search tool.

By way of comparison, Google Play Music includes access to more than 20 million songs, and over 60 million tracks, as well as over 20 million artists and over 30 million albums. If you're a Google Play Music subscriber, then you also get high-quality streaming for free, as well as the ability to play offline. Another standout feature is the ability to stream songs on demand, as well as listen to those songs offline. While other music apps may require you to install their music library on your device, Google Play Music allows you to take the music with you, be it on your smartphone, tablet, or smartphone hotspot. The playlist feature in Google Play Music lets you build your own customized playlists, and share them with others. If you play around with the advanced settings, you can even rate and comment on songs that you play. While the Android music experience can be improved, Google Play Music really nails it. It's well-designed, intuitive, and has one of the best music libraries of any music app on Android. 2. Spotify Spotify is without a doubt the best streaming music app on Android. Spotify features over 20 million tracks, as well as over 20 million artists, over 60 million albums, and 50 million playlists. The major advantage of Spotify is the ability to play offline, meaning that you can listen to your
